

Community Organizer Jobs

Public interest jobs are the jobs in which people work for non-profit organizations that aim at helping a group of people to resolve their issues. A number of public interest jobs are available all over the world. Generally, the numbers of people in the staff for such jobs are few in number, and these employees get a nominal pay, since the organizations employing people for public interest jobs are funded through public funds or grants.

Community organizer jobs include solving people's problems by working collectively for their cause. These jobs aim at achieving social development by ensuring social and economic justice, freedom, equality, and peace for the entire society.

Educational Requirements for Community Organizer Jobs

People wanting to pursue a career in community organization must have at least a bachelor's degree in social and human sciences, although a master's degree in the same is preferred. For these jobs, people must have enough knowledge in public relations, health education, organizing, advocacy, community systems, politics, public administration, and fundraising. Experience in field work is always an added advantage for community organizer jobs.

Responsibilities of Community Organizers

- Forming groups to address issues related to health, environment, education, and economic development.
- Working with others to improve the social conditions of a community.
- Improving the quality of life of the people of the society.
- Working with socially backward and oppressed groups like the homeless, refugees, etc., and enabling them to obtain a living for themselves and stand with others in the society without any discrimination or feeling of not belonging.
- Working towards achieving social justice and freedom.
- Working to create public awareness about human rights.
- Working for equitable distribution of economic resources among different sections of the society.

Roles and Goals in Community Organizer Jobs

People working in community organizer jobs are known by names like advocates, brokers, facilitators, enablers, developers, coordinators, resource planners, reformers, and social change agents. Whatever their names may be, everyone working in these jobs has the same goal to achieve. This goal is the betterment of the society and equality for all without any discrimination in distribution of social and economic resources.

There are several titles for people working in community organizer jobs. A few of them are listed below:

- Youth Program Coordinator
- Health Coalition Director
- Family Policy Analyst
- Drug Prevention Project Director
- Politician
- Environmentalist
- Advocate

Problems in opting for a career in community organizer jobs:

- Most of the titles of community organizer jobs are not listed as occupations.
- Most people lack social commitment skills required for these jobs.
- People might feel uncomfortable since there may be opposition or obstacles while working for a particular issue that brings about a change in the society.
- These jobs are not well-paying jobs, and so people abstain from joining community organizer jobs.

Public Interest Job Feature

- People generally do not consider being trained for these jobs, whereas training is an integral part of community organizer jobs.

So, get into the community organizer job and enjoy serving.

EmploymentCrossing is the largest collection of active jobs in the world.

We continuously monitor the hiring needs of more than 250,000 employers, including virtually every corporation and organization in the United States. We do not charge employers to post their jobs and we aggressively contact and investigate thousands of employers each day to learn of new positions. No one works harder than EmploymentCrossing.

Let EmploymentCrossing go to work for you.